The International Congress of Plant Pathology (ICPP2023) took place in Lyon in France in August 2023. The central theme at the conference was One Health for all plants, crops and trees. “One health”, is a strategy for enhancing interdisciplinary collaborations and communications about all aspects of health care for humans, animals and the environment, in which plant health is usually not included. I will give an overview of the major topics that were discussed during this conference such as Plant pathology in a one health world, Food security, Invasive and emerging pathogens, Global health assessment, Plant-Microbe Interactions and New developments in disease management. I will also reflect on the future of plant pathology in a one health world.
